

SOMETHING TO DO

“THE SWEAT SOAKED T-SHIRT YOU PEEL FROM YOUR SKIN WHEN YOU GET HOME...”

“...They are the cramp in your leg when you wake up in the morning. They are the ringing in your ears that lingers on for days.” Something To Do (S2D) keeps ska alive with their ultra-catchy sound that fans enjoy without any concern for how they'll feel the next day. Something To Do's contest winning, duct-tape inspired song, "When I'm Stuck I Turn To Duck Tape", has brought the group national attention, being mentioned on CNN headline news, NPR and in over 150 other media outlets. Something To Do has appeared regularly on radio and television including their hometown Fox6 News and FM 102.1. With nominations for "Group of the Year" and "Best Ska Band" in their home state of Wisconsin, S2D is definitely being noticed by fans and music industry people alike. They've rocked everything from the world's largest music festival, Summerfest (slated consistently the last several years), the Skappleton music festival, the Ska is Dead tour, and played over 300 other dates in the Midwest, Canada and the East Coast over the last 9 years.

HIGH-ENERGY, HORN-DRIVEN ROCK

Something To Do pride themselves on being entertainers. They are energetic on the stage, igniting the crowd to life with their music. Bouncing around, yelling and singing, prompting the fans to participate in the madness, S2D works to burn the experience in the memories of the audience. Kenny, guitarist and head motivator, proudly claims "People go to concerts to escape and let loose. Our job is to make sure that happens."
